When the remaining single track road between Salen and Tobermory is turned into two lanes, the journey between Craignure and Tobermory will be quicker. But the current proposals mean one Mull community will lose out.

The Problem

The Council plans to build a causeway, across the bay, bringing the two-lane road into the north end of Salen. The road would then be squeezed between the existing one-storey cottages and the sewerage works, meaning the public toilets would have to be demolished. It is also proposed that there would be traffic lights to regulate traffic over Salen's narrow bridge.

These traffic lights will cause congestion in Salen, while doing nothing to address the traffic calming measures needed throughout the village. The planned causeway is 4 metres (13ft) high and 8 metres (26ft) across, and would create a huge and permanent scar across Salen's beautiful bay.

The Solution

RAGS (Road Action Group Salen) have drawn up a plan which does not require a causeway or traffic lights, which advocates sensible traffic calming measures and is vastly cheaper than the Council's plan. RAGS is not about delaying the process of the road - we aim to keep Mull moving.

We Need Your Support

We need the support of both the people of Mull, and those who visit the island, to ensure that the alternative plans are considered. Please join our campaign - we can then represent you when we put our case. Your details will not be passed on.
